$56M

The state is looking to make up some of the bill for last winter's snow removal. Gov. Deval Patrick on Friday filed a spending bill that would allocate nearly $56 million for unpaid snow and ice removal costs that were incurred over the winter, according to the State House News Service. The move by Patrick comes as tax collections through April have totaled $500 million more than budgeted.

Drug dealers denied Dookhan deal

Two men who pleaded guilty to drug crimes were denied their requests to be released because of what they claimed was a connection between their cases and the alleged actions of rogue state drug lab chemist Annie Dookhan.

In a ruling received by prosecutors Friday, Suffolk Superior Court Judge Jeffrey Locke denied motions by Landers Ivey, 53, and Paul Fidler, 48, because a connection to Dookhan's actions was not properly established. Dookhan was not the chemist that tested the drugs in those cases. Both men previously pleaded guilty to drug distribution charges. METRO

Tamerlan Tsarnaev's burial plans in limbo

Controversial call. Officials scramble to figure out where to bury the accused Boston Marathon bomber's body.

Gov. Deval Patrick refused yesterday to get involved in the controversy surrounding where to bury the body of accused Boston Marathon bomber Tamerlan Tsarnaev, saying the family must decide what to do with the body.

The question of whether the alleged 26-year-old terrorist's body will be sent to his family's home in Russia, or if it will be buried in the state where he is accused of setting off bombs that killed three people and injured about 260 more, remains to be answered.

As of yesterday, his body remained at the Graham, Putnam and Mahoney funeral parlors in Worcester, with a destination to be determined.

Peter Stefan, the funeral home's owner, has been unable to find a cemetery willing to accept Tsarnaev's body, and said yesterday he would seek the help of the government.

"First of all, this isn't a state or a federal issue; it's the family's issue," Patrick said. "And the family has some options. I assume they will make a decision soon. I hope they do. I think everybody is feeling upset about what happened."

In response to reports that Tsarnaev's family wanted to bury him in Cambridge, City Manager Robert Healy on Sunday night preemptively denied the request.

"I have determined that it is not in the best interest of 'peace within the city' to execute a cemetery deed for a plot within the Cambridge Cemetery for the body of Tamerlan Tsarnaev," Healy said.

Patrick said he was unsure of the legal rights of communities that want to refuse the body and declined to comment on whether he'd oppose a burial in Massachusetts.

When asked if he was concerned whether the burial location would become a shrine or a place for people to gather and protest, and whether he was concerned with public safety, Patrick said, "No. I'm not."

A warning to T commuters: 'Don't touch the driver'

T attacks. Transit officials said they will prosecute riders for assaulting workers.

In response to an uptick in violent attacks on T workers, the MBTA yesterday rolled out a public awareness campaign to discourage unstable and irate customers from assaulting employees.

There have been 28 attacks on T workers this year, said Joe Pesaturo, a T spokesman. The attacks include one that involved a mob of teens pummeling a bus driver in Dorchester.

MBTA General Manager Beverly Scott recently sent a letter to T employees about the effort.

"I want you to know how deeply troubled I am by several recent brazen attacks on our employees in the course of them doing their jobs, and to let you know that we will not sit by idly and let these egregious acts go unanswered," Scott wrote in the letter. "Certainly, getting assaulted is not part of any T employee's job."

Scott and Transit Police Chief Paul MacMillan recorded public service announcements that will be played over the intercom in the transit system.

"Assaulting an MBTA employee is against the law. Think twice before putting your hands on T staff. We will find you, arrest you and prosecute you," MacMillan warns in the recorded message.

The posters are plastered on the back of bus seats, making it appear as though the person seated in front of the image is getting cuffed.

The caption reads, "Don't touch the driver." A different set of posters sends the same message. It warns: "Violence toward a bus driver is against the law. We will prosecute."

After a recent rash of driver assaults, a new ad campaign on MBTA buses warns riders not to attack drivers. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Stoughton murder suspect caught in Mattapan

Woman murdered.
A Dorchester man is accused in the killing of his estranged wife.

Boston police were crediting an alert citizen yesterday with helping in the capture of a man wanted for allegedly killing his former wife after the person spotted the man's car in Mattapan Square.

Willie Foster, 47, of Dorchester pleaded not guilty and was ordered held without bail during his arraignment for murder.

Foster is accused of fatally stabbing his former wife Anita Clark. The 46-year-old woman was found dead inside her Stoughton home Saturday evening.

Willie Foster / STOUGHTON POLICE

Police on Sunday said they were searching for Foster in connection with the murder.

Foster's car was spotted near Mattapan Square just after 7 a.m. yesterday. Police moved in and arrested him on scene.

Police Commissioner Ed Davis took to Twitter to thank an alert citizen who spotted Foster's car.

Court records show that Clark had filed for divorce in 2011 citing cruel and verbally abusive treatment by Foster, according to the Globe. The couple has two children.

The documents showed the couple, who were married in 2006, tried to repair the marriage and attended counseling.

When police searched Clark's Stoughton home they found her dead in a bedroom closet and there were signs that a struggle took place in the bedroom, according to the Globe.

Foster is due back in court June 7.

Apple misses iPhone customers as global carriers balk at terms

Smart phones. The slowdown in adding partners is contributing to stagnating iPhone sales growth.

Apple is missing out on a chance to court as many as 2.8 billion new smartphone customers, many of them in Asia, as wireless-service providers balk at conditions imposed by Apple and drag their heels in signing on as partners.

Apple has announced fewer than a dozen new wireless-service providers to sell the device since September 2011, leaving the total at about 240. Holdouts represent billions of would-be subscribers in countries such as China, Japan, India and Russia, said Horace Dediu, a market analyst who runs Asymco.com. Samsung Electronics Apple's biggest smartphone rival, sells devices through almost all of the world's 800 carriers, Asymco said.

China Mobile Ltd., the world's biggest phone company, and NTT DoCoMo Inc., Japan's largest mobile carrier, are among providers that haven't agreed to carry the iPhone, citing the high costs of subsidies needed to make the device affordable or other terms they find unacceptable. The slowdown in adding new partners is contributing to stagnating iPhone sales growth, giving Samsung-led competitors a potential advantage and putting pressure on Apple to deliver a cheaper device or make other margin-threatening concessions. BLOOMBERG iPhone sales increased 7 percent, to 37.4 million units, the smallest gain since the device was introduced in 2007.

As Apple sells fewer iPhones and more of its less-profitable products, its gross margin also has narrowed — to 37.5 percent last quarter from 47.4 percent a year earlier. / GETTY IMAGES

Reform clash. At least 20 dead after Islamist protests in Bangladesh

At least 20 Bangladeshis were killed yesterday in clashes between police and hardline Islamists demanding religious reforms, as violence spread beyond the capital Dhaka to other parts of the country.

The clashes began on Sunday after 200,000 Islamist supporters marched in Dhaka to press demands critics said would amount to the "Talibanisation" of a country that maintains secularism as state policy, but they were met by lines of police.

Hundreds of protesters, many wearing white Muslim skull caps and throwing stones, regrouped — and police fired teargas, rubber bullets and water cannons to disperse them. REUTERS

Few options for Syria to strike back after raids

Response. Syria did not retaliate when Israel bombed a suspected missile convoy in January.

Syrian President Bashar al-Assad has few good options for military retaliation after Israel's air strikes over the weekend but the attacks could redouble support from his regional allies Iran and Hezbollah.

Assad, already battling rebel fighters who have seized large parts of his country and killed many thousands of his troops, can ill afford to confront the region's dominant military power in a devastating and likely one-sided war.

And his allies in Iran and Hezbollah are also wary of starting a new battle which would divert from their determined efforts to keep their strategic ally in power in Damascus.

"Significant military action is unlikely," said Paul Salem, director of the Carnegie Middle East Centre.

Israel's twin air strikes within 48 hours shook Damascus, sent pillars of flame into the night sky and killed dozens of soldiers. REUTERS

US think tank says immigrant amnesty would worsen deficits

Upcoming. It is only the first of what is expected to be a flurry of competing studies attempting to influence the immigration debate.

Granting legal status to 11 million undocumented foreigners living in the United States would significantly add to government budget deficits, according to a study released yesterday by the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Heritage, a think tank headed by former Sen. Jim DeMint, has assumed a leading role in opposition to a bipartisan, comprehensive immigration bill being considered by the Senate.

The legislation couples the legalization proposal with a new program to admit high-skilled and low-skilled workers to fill jobs that industry and agriculture say are going begging because of a shortage of available U.S. workers. The Heritage study did not look at the impact on the economy of those provisions.

Coming three days before the Senate Judiciary Committee is scheduled to begin the immigration measure, the Heritage Foundation study estimated that legalizing the 11 million would put a severe strain on government programs.

The government benefits and services include health care, Social Security, public education, aid to low-income families and a range of other programs. The Heritage Foundation report was blasted by other conservatives, even before it was issued. REUTERS

Taxpayers

$6.3T

Over the next 50 years, it would cost taxpayers a net $6.3 trillion, according DeMint, a former Republican senator from South Carolina and a favorite of the conservative Tea Party movement. That would work out to $124 billion a year on average.

Will Bieber, Pink, Combs and Gomez save 'Idol'?

"American Idol" producer Nigel Lythgoe will not let the veteran reality TV show go gently into that good night. Nope. The producer has reportedly decided to spend some big bucks to boost the show's sinking ratings.

So who does he have his eye on? Justin Bieber, Selena Gomez, Pink and Sean "Diddy" Combs, reports Radaronline.com.

"You can't get any bigger than Justin Bieber. The executives are calling it their dream team, because who wouldn't tune in to see Justin and Selena, Pink and Diddy?" a Fox insider tells the site. "Pink has been approached in the past and turned it down — as well as Diddy, who wanted too much money. It will cost a fortune to get them, but the show has gotten so stale that Fox is desperate for a revamp; they're willing to pay to put 'Idol' back on top."

That means the current lineup of judges — Mariah Carey, Nicki Minaj, Keith Urban and Randy Jackson — will possibly not be returning. Apparently, the only one who's safe is Ryan Seacrest.

Instead of paying the big bucks for big names, why not pay for big personalities who actually play off of one another and are entertaining to watch? Or is that just crazy talk?

Mister Cee 'suspends' himself after gay prostitution bust

One of Hot 97's most popular DJs — Mister Cee — is having a rough few days.

The DJ, who also produced the Notorious B.I.G.'s album "Ready to Die," was arrested after he allegedly propositioned a male prostitute in Brooklyn. Unluckily for Cee, that prostitute was actually an undercover cop, according to New York Daily News.

But now Cee is saying that the press (and the cops) have it all wrong — dude was really a lady.

"I am not gay," Mister Cee told Hot 97 program director Ebro Darden on Monday morning's show. Cee then claimed he was a victim of a "sting operation." "They tried to turn it around and say the female officer was a male officer. It was a sting operation," he says.

According to reports, Cee pleaded guilty to loitering for the purpose of engaging in a prostitution offense back in 2011. That prostitute was later identified as a man.

Cee has now decided to suspend himself from the radio station. "I'ma suspend myself, I'ma take myself off the radio," he said. "I'ma take some time off and I'ma suspend myself."

Wait. Forgive me as I'm elderly, but you call being a loving and supportive partner "wife-ing"? And that is a bad thing? What is called "husband-ing"? Forgetting to take out the garbage?

Outdoor adventure in the Finger Lakes

Destinations. Head to the area that New York's governor calls a "treasure."

As the seasons change, you might be itching to get out of the city limits and be someplace where honking is replaced by the gurgling of a river or simply the silence of a sparkling lake. So set your GPS for the Finger Lakes, which New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo just last week called a state tourism "treasure." The region's warm weather is just beginning, so book your trip during the super-quick summer.

Hike

For a hike you can wedge in between wine tastings, head to Grimes Glen in Naples. This spot is perfect for a packed itinerary — squeeze it in and get as close as time allows to a beautiful waterfall. Prepare to get shoes muddy or even wet — you may pick your way along large rocks in the creek. Reward yourself with a grape dessert at nearby Monica's Pies.

3 Reasons to go to Maryland this summer

Festivals Galore

From food to music and the arts, there's something for everyone. The nation's largest free arts festival, Artscape, takes place in Baltimore from July 19-21. In addition to exhibits from fine artists, fashion designers, photographers and craftsmen, there will be a full schedule of performing arts, including an appearance by the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. For something a little more eclectic, check out the Maryland Renaissance Festival in Annapolis from Aug. 24 through Oct. 20.

American History

Maryland was settled in the 17th century, and towns along the Eastern shore have preserved buildings and artifacts from that era. Annapolis and Chesapeake Bay will continue their commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the War of 1812 and the writing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" through a walking tour. In June, Francis Scott Key's original manuscript for what would become our national anthem will go on display. And for Civil War enthusiasts, Maryland is the home of many battle sites.

Road Trips

Maryland has tons of scenic byways that delve into areas rich with culture. The Booth's Escape journey charts the escape route of John Wilkes Booth as he fled from Washington, D.C. The Maryland portion of Harriet Tubman's Underground Railroad follows an Eastern Shore byway plentiful with African-American heritage.

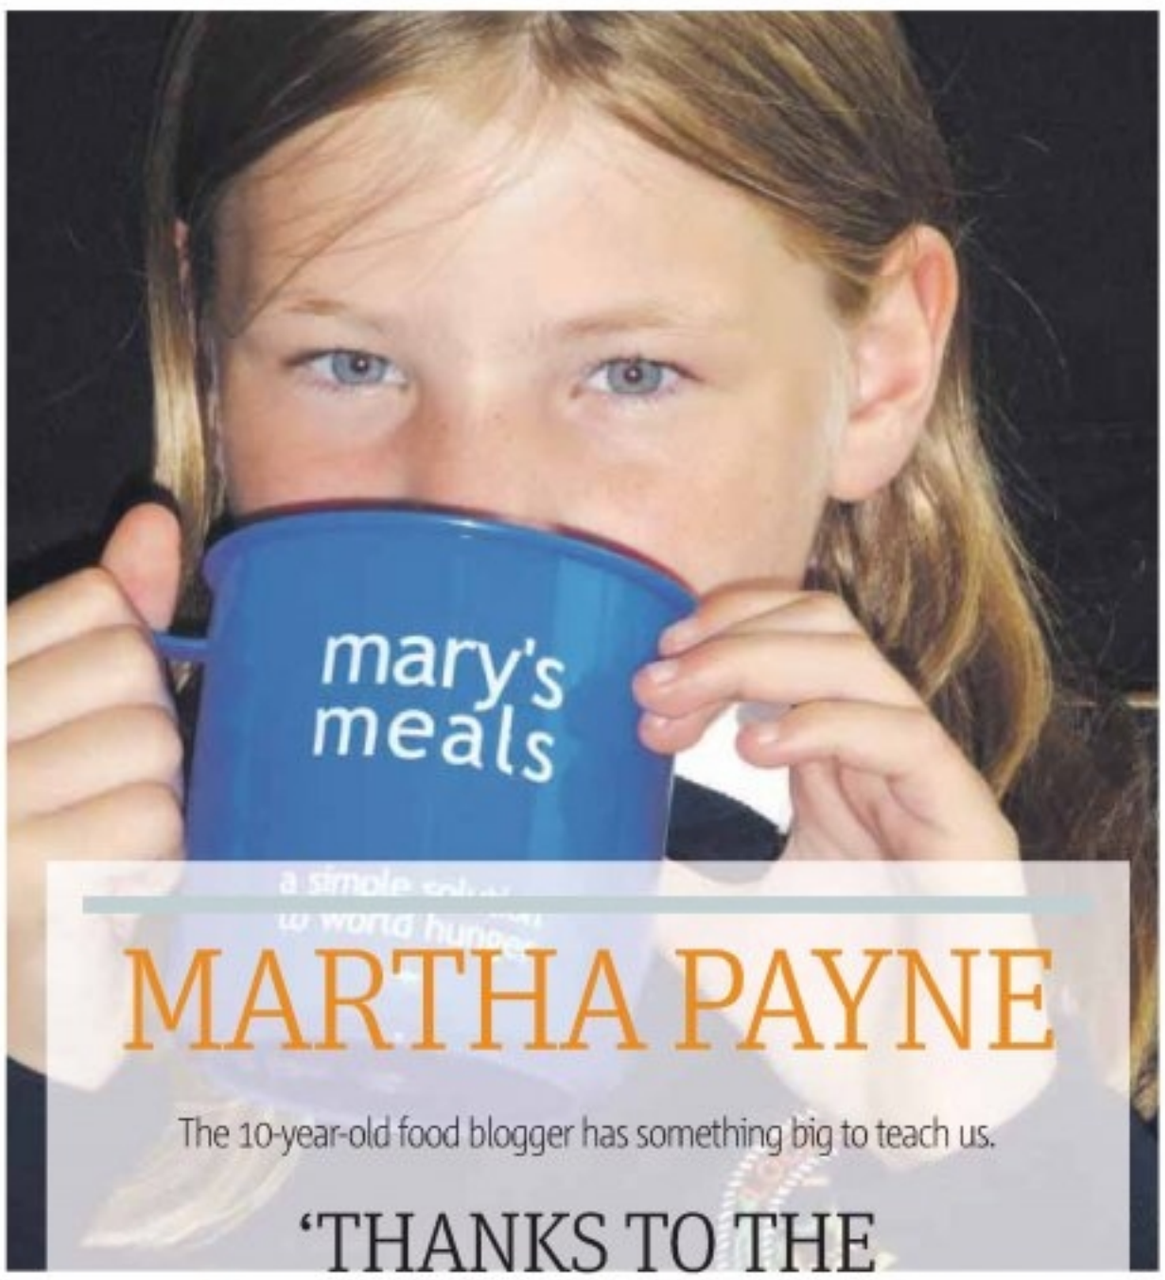
Mary's Meals built a kitchen in a Malawian School, thanks to Payne's fundraising.



MARTHA PAYNE

The 10-year-old food blogger has something big to teach us.

'THANKS TO THE INTERNET, WE CAN SPEAK OUT'

One year ago, 10-year-old Scottish schoolgirl Martha Payne made headlines for blogging about her school meals and challenging food kids eat every day. At first, her primary school in Lochgilphead, in western Scotland, forbade her from taking photos of what was on the lunch menu. But after her blog NeverSeconds went viral worldwide, the school gave in and announced all students would be given unlimited servings of fruit and vegetables. Today, Payne is using her media success to champion food causes and raise money for Mary's Meals, a charity dedicated to supporting projects aimed at the poorest communities of the world to prevent child hunger.

How did you realize the food in your school was unhealthy?
I live on a small farm and we grow some of our food. My food at home is very different. The food at school is very processed; simpler food is better.

Now you support other kids worldwide. Can you tell us a little bit about that work?
My grandfather was a volunteer for Mary's Meals and I have grown up knowing about it. When someone commented on my blog that I was lucky to get any school lunch at all, I decided to tell the readers about Mary's Meals. I am glad I did!

Do you consider yourself a role model for kids?
I didn't plan to be a role model, but if kids decide to do more to be heard and for others then I am happy!

How would you encourage other kids and teenagers to contribute to this cause?
Kids are really good at sharing and getting along. We do it every day in the playgrounds at our schools. We should remember we are the experts at that. Because of the Internet, we can share beyond our playground and countries. Also, don't be scared to start a blog. You can change what you write without smudges, you can say what you care about, and you can publish it!

Buh-bye unsightly veins, hello bikini! / GETTY IMAGES, ZOONAR RF

It's not vain to want to hide your veins

Who's that lady?
We break down vein treatment options.

It's springtime and thoughts are turning to wearing shorts and baring legs — which can mean anguish for women with varicose veins.

"When spring comes, we get busier. Everyone wants them gone before summer," says Dr. Luis Navarro, director of The Vein Treatment Center in New York and author of "No More Varicose Veins." "The body can't heal them, they just get worse. Over time other problems can develop, such as ankle swelling, pigmentation or thrombosis."

The good news is that treating varicose veins is now far less painful than in previous years, and it comes with less downtime. We asked Dr. Navarro to tell us about the different treatment options.

Painless sclerotherapy
"Sclerotherapy can involve up to 200 injections in three sessions. It can be done in a day, or it can also be done in multiple visits. We numb with ice and pressure to overload sensory fibers, so the patient doesn't feel pain. Then we inject a chemical compound, which collapses the vein."

Foam sclerotherapy
"This is a stronger compound and used for deeper, bigger veins. The foam needs to be used with care and the person performing the operation needs to know when to use liquid or foam — or a combination of both. It's harder to control than liquid."

Endovenous laser ablation
"This uses modern laser to weld the main vein shut and then we use a needle to remove it — that's called phlebectomy. There are no stitches. We use an anesthetic and you don't know it's being done. It can take as little as 35 minutes."

Ligation and stripping
"This is traditional surgery, which is done in a hospital under a general anesthetic. Thirty years ago, it was the only option. It involves multiple cuts to allow for the surgeon to perform the phlebectomy."

Not spider veins

What are varicose veins? What about telangiectasias (spider veins)? What causes them?

"Varicose veins are the big, ropey looking veins and are a blue or greenish color. Spider veins are reddish-purple and look like little lines. A lot of people have both. Fifty percent of adults have some degree of varicose veins by age 50, and 70 percent have them by age 70. They increase through life: Pregnancy can cause them, but the biggest factor is hereditary."

Women's Health Checklist

Juggling today's busy schedules can make it hard to take time out to care for ourselves. But especially for women, it's important to make room in our lives for the special health care we need.

To stay healthy and strong, remember:

• If you were not vaccinated against the Human Papilloma Virus (HPV) as a teenager, ask your doctor if the vaccine is right for you. The HPV vaccine is a series of three shots given over 6 months to protect you from HPV and other health problems that the infection can cause.

• See your primary care provider (PCP) for a well visit (annual physical) once a year to make sure your overall health is the best it can be. At these visits, you can discuss any concerns you may have about your health, or what to expect at each new stage of your life. You can also discuss things like diet and exercise or domestic situations that may make you feel unsafe in your home.

• If you're pregnant or trying to become pregnant, see your obstetrician to get a comprehensive program of care to help you have a safe pregnancy and a healthy, strong baby. It's important that you attend all scheduled appointments to make sure you're getting the nutrition, exercise and care you need. Be sure to schedule and keep your post-partum visit (4-6 weeks after delivery).

• Get a Pap test (also known as the Pap Smear). It's one of the most reliable and effective cancer screening tests a woman can get. Your health care provider will tell you when you should have your first Pap test and how often you should be tested based on your particular health needs and history.

• Discuss with your health care provider when you should have your first mammogram and how frequently after that. Mammograms help to identify signs of breast cancer early. Continue to get mammograms regularly, because the test works best when it can be compared to previous results to check for any changes in breast tissue.

No matter what your age, it's important to see your PCP or gynecologist for preventive, routine care and any time you have unexpected symptoms or have questions or concerns you'd like to discuss. You're never too busy to put good health on your calendar.

The FDA's actions follow a 2010 meeting of a federal advisory panel which unanimously recommended that the agency reclassify tanning devices. / ISTOCKPHOTO

FDA's new rules encourage you to think before you tan

Safety first. The administration also cautions against use by people under 18.

Tanning beds and sunlamps will be required to carry stronger warning labels under new regulations proposed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which is also recommending the machines not be used by people under the age of 18.

The FDA said on Monday that it plans to reclassify sunbeds from low-risk to moderate-risk products, meaning they will need to be cleared by the agency before being allowed onto the market.

Faulty equipment has led to patients being burned or exposed to too much radiation, Jeffrey Shuren, director of the FDA's center for devices and radiological health, said in an interview.

Skin cancer is the most common form of cancer in the United States, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Basal cell and squamous cell cancer, the two most common forms, are generally curable; but melanoma, the third most common type, is deadly.

In 2009, the most recent year numbers are available, 61,646 people in the United States were diagnosed with melanoma and 9,199 people died, according to the CDC.

The FDA's proposed regulations stop short of recommendations made by the International Agency for Research on Cancer, part of the World Health Organization, which in 2009 concluded that commercial tanning devices were more dangerous than previously thought and recommended people under 18 be banned from using them.

The FDA's regulations also stop short of new rules being developed by some U.S. states. More than 30 states regulate the use of tanning facilities to differing degrees. In January 2012, California became the first state to ban tanning beds for all people under 18.

The Indoor Tanning Association argues vigorously that the decision on whether a teen is allowed to suntan is one for parents, not government.

"Is the next step to ban teens from sunbathing at public beaches and pools?" the association asked in a statement last year in opposition to New Jersey's proposal to ban tanning bed use for those under 17. REUTERS

SMOOTHIES YOU'LL WANT TO SIP THIS SUMMER

With the weather getting warmer, it's time to whip out the blender and make some refreshing beverages. Here are three recipes that offer delicious flavor and potent health benefits. It's strategic sipping at its best.

2 Energy Boost

Give yourself a jolt of energy with this refreshing green tea smoothie. The combo of caffeine from the tea plus protein from the yogurt keeps you alert and focused.

Ingredients:
- 1 bag green tea
- ½ cup fat-free vanilla Greek yogurt
- 1 cup fresh or frozen mango cubes
- ½ cup boiling water
- 3-5 ice cubes

Preparation: Brew the green tea bag in the water for 3-5 minutes. Remove the bag and allow the tea to cool to room temperature. In a blender, combine the brewed tea, yogurt, mango and ice cubes. Blend until well combined. Transfer to a glass and enjoy!

Makes 1 serving. 190 calories; 11 g protein; 0 g fat; 37 g carbohydrate; 3 g fiber; 0 mg cholesterol; 55 mg sodium

3 Beauty Blend

This unites two antioxidant superstars: blueberries and pomegranate. Antioxidants help shield your cells from the sun's UV rays to keep your skin looking youthful and radiant.

Ingredients:
- ¼ cup unsweetened frozen blueberries
- ½ cup 100 percent pomegranate juice
- ¼ cup nonfat vanilla yogurt
- ½ teaspoon lemon zest
- ½ teaspoon fresh lemon juice
- 3-5 ice cubes

Preparation: In a blender, combine the blueberries, pomegranate juice, yogurt, lemon zest, lemon juice and ice cubes. Blend until smooth. Pour into a glass and serve!

Makes 1 serving. 235 calories; 2 g protein; 0.5 g fat; 56 g carbohydrate; 3 g fiber; 0 mg cholesterol; 40 mg sodium

1 Slim-Down Smoothie

If you're looking to shed a few pounds, this thick and satisfying smoothie is an effective meal replacement option for breakfast, lunch or even dinner. It's super-easy to whip up and yields a very generous portion — and with more than 30 grams of protein, it will keep you feeling full for hours.

Ingredients:
- ¾ cup fat-free milk (or substitute soy or almond milk)
- 1 cup frozen strawberries
- ½ banana
- 1 scoop whey protein powder (you can substitute pea, rice, hemp or other protein powder)
- 3-5 ice cubes

Preparation: In a blender, combine the milk, strawberries, banana, whey protein and ice cubes. Blend until smooth. Pour into a glass and drink up!

Makes 1 serving. 295 calories; 31 g protein; 3 g fat (1.5 g saturated); 42 g carbohydrate; 7 g fiber; 75 mg cholesterol; 130 mg sodium

How to get that surfer's bod for the summer

Directions

- Perform each move back to back for 30 seconds each with no rest. That's round one.
- Rest 30 seconds and repeat this format twice more for a total of three rounds.
- Remember to maintain perfect form and go at your own pace.

MEREDITH ENGEL
meredith.engel@metro.us

Fitness. Pretty soon, people will start asking you where the best place to "hang ten" is.

Those surfers you see killin' it on the waves? They weren't born with that ripped bod. All of that paddling and popping up and down in the water "creates that long, lean physique," says celebrity fitness trainer, Adam Rosante, the founder of The People's Bootcamp. He created a new workout called WaveShape to help you get the surfer's body of your dreams.

"My friend Anna Jerstrom, the owner of Calavera Swimwear, called me one day and asked if I could help her and her athletes ramp up their training regimen," Rosante says. "She sponsors these amazing women who face down some of the biggest waves on the planet. So it was really important to me that they stay as functionally strong, agile and powerful as possible."

Rosante's workout is based in a framework he dubs "power intervals," which improve endurance. The moves are done over a series of 30 seconds, so you can focus on form, not reps. You can learn the full series (12 moves) when it launches June 1 as a free online community with video at www.getinwaveshape.com. You can pre-register now.

Rosante gave us a sneak peak at five of the moves that'll get your body in surf shape. "Do this three times a week with another two days of cross-training of your choice and you'll be bouncing quarters off your abs come June," he says.

Step 1

Lip Rippers

Stand with feet slightly wider than hip width apart. Interlace your fingers and raise your hands over your right shoulder. Brace your core, open your chest and pull your shoulders down your back. Step out to the left into a side lunge, be sure to push the hips back and keep the left knee behind the toes, as you bring your hands down diagonally across your body to the outside of your left foot. Return to center, raising the left knee high as you explosively jump off the right foot. Land softly. Repeat on the left side for the full 30 seconds, then switch and perform the move with hands over the left shoulder, stepping out to the right.

Step 2

Agility Jumps

Stand with feet slightly wider than hip width apart. Brace the core as you bend the knees into a low squat, arms extended behind the back for stability. Pause only briefly at the bottom of the movement and explosively jump up and forward over an imaginary line far out in front of you. Land softly, pushing the hips back to absorb the impact, and immediately jump backward to land in the starting position.

Repeat the jump, this time turning the body mid-air to land 180 degrees in the opposite direction. Once again, repeat the 180 jump to land softly back at the starting position. That's one rep. Continue repeating.

Step 3

Tap Dogs

Assume a push-up position with wrists directly under shoulders. Tap the left shoulder with right fingertips and return the hand to the floor. Tap the right shoulder with the left fingertips and return the hand to the floor. Perform a pushup. At the top of the motion, brace the core as you extend the right arm and left leg until they are parallel to the floor. Lower the arm and leg. Now extend the left arm and right leg until parallel to the floor. Lower the arm and leg. That's one rep. Continue repeating.

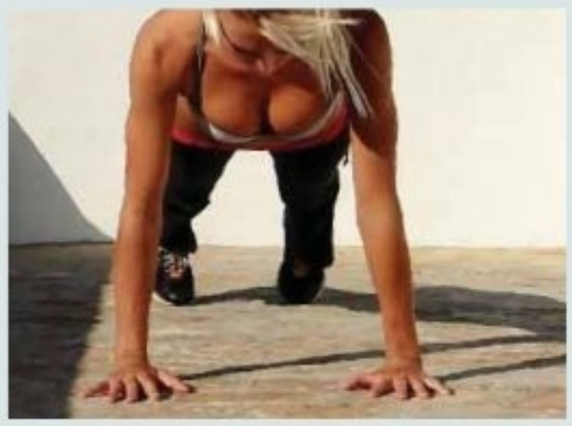
Step 4

Surfies

Begin in a squat position with your hands on the floor, wrists positioned under your shoulders. Kick your feet back to a plank position. Immediately shoot the feet forward, twisting your torso and lower half so that you land facing left. Stand tall as you open the chest and squeeze the core and glutes. Twist back down to the right to place hands back in the starting position and kick the feet back to the starting position. You should be right where you started at the top of a plank position. Repeat, this time twisting to the right. Continue alternating sides. As you perform the move, you should look like a surfer popping up on a board.

Step 5

High-Lows



Assume a push-up position with wrists directly below the shoulders. Slowly lower the left forearm to the floor, elbow directly below the shoulder, and then the right forearm. Return, one hand at a time, to the top of a push-up position. Continue lowering and raising.

Options abound for surgery after cancer diagnosis

Health. Talk to your doctor about finding the best one for you.

If you've been diagnosed with breast cancer, you know that the journey isn't over once the cancer is out. With proper planning, however, reconstructive surgery can be a positive step toward recovery. The important thing is to fully explore all options and find the best one for you.

"Before deciding on [a] mastectomy, discuss your options with your board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon who specializes in breast reconstruction," says Dr. Andrew P. Ordon, F.A.C.S., an aesthetic plastic and reconstructive surgeon with a private practice in New York City. "There are a number of options based on the type of tumor and how aggressive the cancer is, and the stage of the disease. There's also the option of immediate or delayed reconstruction," he adds.

Indeed, there are minimally invasive choices for women who have a less aggressive form of the disease.

"Less aggressive tumor types would be candidates for nipple-sparing mastectomy and implant. Also, placement of a tissue expander [that allows] serial skin expansion with eventual placement of a final prosthesis is the most simple and least invasive, but it involves multiple stages."

If a whole breast is reconstructed, doctors spare no expense to make it look and feel as normal as possible for the patient.

"With whole breast removal, nipple areola can be reconstructed at a later date using a number of great options taking skin from another part of the body."

LINDA CLARKE

Don't fear it

Diagnosed or not, Dr. Ordon urges women to not fear breast cancer

"Today's results with breast reconstruction are better then ever," he emphasizes. "Breast cancer is a treatable disease when detected early, so don't ignore any symptoms you're experiencing out of fear of losing a sensitive part of you."

Getting support

Look Good Feel Better, a free support program for cancer patients, recently launched an app that gives users tips and ideas for skin care, makeup, wearing wigs and dressing after a mastectomy. Such support helps patients regain self-esteem and confidence, which is invaluable for a person battling the disease. For more info, go to www.lookgoodfeelbetter.org.

Unintended pregnancy can affect all ages

Babies. Just because you've passed the common window doesn't mean a baby can't sneak up on you.

There are around 3 million unintended pregnancies every year in the U.S. It's an issue often associated with teenagers, but a proportion of women this happens to are older — and some are married.

"Anyone who is sexually active potentially can become pregnant," Hilda Hutcherson, a Columbia University Medical Center professor of clinical obstetrics and gynecology, reminds all qualifying females. She gave us a refresher course on our options for making sure a baby doesn't catch us by surprise.

Birth control pills: You can still take the pill well past your teen years, Hutcherson says. "It's a safe option for women of all ages. Initially, when it was first passed, it was recommended for women until age 30, then it was age 35, but now most women can safely use it right into their 40s until they reach menopause."

The morning-after pill: "This should only be used in emergencies and not relied on as a form of contraception," Hutcherson says. "It should be used as soon after intercourse as possible."

Condoms: "Condoms work great if people use them consistently and right from the beginning of intercourse," she says. "The female condom is wonderful: I thought it was going to be popular, but it's large and makes slurping noises during sex. The newer ones are less noisy, but it has not caught on."

IUDs: They're convenient and have undergone major improvements, Hutcherson says. "Women stopped using IUDs because of infections, which caused infertility. But modern ones are smaller and improved. Even young women who haven't had children can use them. They work well and you just leave them in place until you want to have children."

The facts

About half of pregnancies in America are unplanned, according to Womenshealth.gov. Here are their tips for dealing with an unexpected baby.

- Start taking care of yourself right away. Take 400 to 800 micrograms (400 to 800 mcg or 0.4 to 0.8 mg) of folic acid every day. Stop alcohol, tobacco and drug use.
- Make a doctor's visit to confirm your pregnancy. Discuss your health and any issues that could affect it.
- Ask your doctor to recommend a counselor who you can talk to about your situation.

Yes, you can get pregnant over 40. / GETTY IMAGES, FUSE

Age ain't nothin' but a number

If you've hit menopause — no periods for 12 consecutive months — you can stop using contraception, Hutcherson says. But not a moment before! "Some women become relaxed because they think they're too old to become pregnant. The chances are small — it's less for women over 35, and even less for women over 40 — but it isn't zero."

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21. You may be holding all the trump cards, but you're not likely to use this power unjustly. The opposition will admire and appreciate your restraint.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. Because someone has helped you when you needed it in the past, your compassion is easily aroused. Admirably, you will be the first to respond to someone in need.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22. An issue of personal interest might also appeal to your friends. Although they may not know how to turn it into a group endeavor, you do.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Focusing on the virtues rather than the shortcomings of friends will not only boost their egos, but also make you very popular.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. You're basically a very imaginative person to begin with, but today that will be even more so. To your credit, you'll put your novel ideas to work.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Because you'll strive to treat others as fairly as possible, things will work out quite well. Friends and colleagues will respond in kind to your fairness.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. An enterprising friend is likely to provide you with some helpful tips. Use them to extract even more juice from an already profitable situation.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. Don't be surprised if you derive an unexpected bonus from help that you render to another. You'll set a wonderful example, and the right people will notice.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. Even though your needs are important, they won't be more so than those of your loved ones. You'll figure out a way to help both family and yourself.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. Outward appearances might affect how your associates view things, but not you. You'll know how to dig deep beneath the surface.

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20. You might be in a money-making mood, but try to profit for the benefit of others, not yourself. You'll get the most satisfaction from indulging your charitable instincts. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sinatra gone 15 years, but not forgotten

Frank Sinatra's music lives on through radio, TV, records and films. His fans are legion and include the likes of Harry Prime, Peggy King, Diana Krall, Michael Buble, Billy Jon Coogan and Tony Bennett — among a host of superb vocalists. Frank Sinatra left us on May 14, 1998, but we feel he is still very much with us — and every now and then, his voice can be heard in commercials on radio and TV. Sinatra and his beloved Rat Pack are still as popular as ever — 15 years later! We love them all. Peace be with you, Frank.

HERB STARK, VIA E-MAIL

New tower testament to America

Terrorists who attacked us on 9/11 and destroyed the World Trade Center thought they could knock us out, but we're back on top with the final piece on top of 1 World Trade Center and Old Glory flying high. The spire that now rests will make the skyscraper 1,776 feet high, truly a most noble achievement and one that should make every American proud.

This came also as a milestone as the second anniversary of the SEAL team raid that took out Osama bin Laden.

But as I think back to 9/11, I remember that nefarious and egregious act of hate that caused our spirit to swell with renewed sense of patriotism. Flags were flying all over our country. Churches and temples were full. America was hard at work raising money to help the victims. It truly was a time that did try men's souls. When things were at their very worst, we found ourselves to be at our very best.

B's bag Maple Leafs, take 2-1 series lead

NHL playoffs. A big second period and the improved play of Tuukka Rask powered the Bruins past Toronto in Game 3.

The Bruins ruined the first playoff game in Toronto in nine years as they bounced back from a 4-2 loss in Game 2 at TD Garden and won a crucial Game 3 at Air Canada Centre, 5-2, last night. Goaltender Tuukka Rask made a career-high 46 saves for Boston and five different players scored goals for the Bruins, who took a 2-1 series lead in the best-of-seven first round series. Game 4 is tomorrow (7 p.m., NESN) in Toronto and Game 5 is set for Friday (7 p.m., NESN) back in Boston.

Tuukka Time

Bruins netminder Tuukka Rask came up huge for the B's in Game 3, stopping a career-high 46 shots to give Boston a 2-1 series advantage.

The Bruins truly cranked things up offensively in the second period with three momentum-turning goals. Rich Peverley converted a one-timer after Jaromir Jagr forced a turnover behind Toronto's goal. Nathan Horton gave Boston a two-goal lead with a one-timer from Milan Lucic then Daniel Paille took the air out of the building with a shorthanded goal.

The B's originally held the lead, 1-0, in the first period on Adam McQuaid's first career playoff goal, a shot from the point that somehow found its way past Maple Leafs goaltender James Reimer (33 saves).

Toronto didn't pack it in late in the game, however, as Phil Kessel scored for the second game in a row — this time on a power play. Rask hung in there in the third as the Leafs outshot the B's 19-6 in the frame. David Krejci clinched things for Boston with an empty-netter.

Boston's top forward line of Horton (one goal, one assist), Krejci (one goal, two assists) and Lucic (three assists) was outstanding once again, carrying the B's to the all-important win.

T.O. wants to play for Patriots

Former NFL star receiver Terrell Owens wants to play for New England, despite not having played in an actual NFL game since December of 2010.

"I think that's a no-brainer," Owens told Blindside football.com about playing for the Patriots. "You look at what they've done over the years. Under the tutelage of Tom and Coach Belichick, I think the sky would be the limit in terms of what I'd be able to do, considering my body of work and my history of playing the game."

Owens was spotted playing catch with Tom Brady last month at USC. METRO

Sox bats holding own against elite pitchers

MLB. Red Sox batters have knocked most top-notch pitchers out of games early with a patient approach.

Although the Red Sox were stymied by right-hander Yu Darvish Sunday in Texas (14 strikeouts), Boston has actually done quite well against opposing aces. In fact, Sunday was the first time the Sox have lost when facing an opposing ace this season.

Obviously, the classification of an ace is different from person to person, but in most eyes the Red Sox have gone up against four top hurlers this season — CC Sabathia (April 1), R.A. Dickey (April 7), David Price (April 13) and Darvish (May 5).

In those four starts the Red Sox have gone 3-1, with a combined run differential of 24-7, and the pitchers have a combined ERA of 5.56.

Price and Darvish were the only ones to make it into the sixth inning as the Sox got Dickey and Sabathia out of the game after just 4 2/3 and 5 innings respectively.

Patience at the plate has been the key to getting past opposing aces.

"Our overall offensive approach has been outstanding," manager John Farrell said last week. "Guys aren't afraid to pass the baton on to the next guy. They'll take their walks in key spots. We've had good situational hitting."

Ace kickers

"Most importantly, we've driven the pitch counts up of starters and have gotten into the bullpen."

Red Sox manager John Farrell
On the team's early success at the plate this season

When you're going up against the best of the best, aside from putting runs on the board, the team's next goal is to be able to get that pitcher out of the game as fast as possible. Besides scoring runs, driving up pitch counts is the next best thing.

In the season opener in the New York, Red Sox hitters worked four walks off of Sabathia, which forced him out of the game after the fifth inning after throwing 102 pitches. The Red Sox went on to score four runs off of Yankees relievers in their 8-2 win.

A few weeks later, they forced Tampa's Price from the game after six innings and 106 pitches in a game eventually won on a walk-off single from Shane Victorino in the 10th inning.
